Poachers kill elephants in Africa to remove their tusks.

Most illegal ivory moves from Africa to East Asia. China is the most popular destination.

It is often moved thousands of miles by sea in shipping containers.

Garlic and fish are sometimes used to hide the ivory.

Some people think that owning ivory will bring them good luck or make them successful.

Illegal ivory is used to make lots of different products, including ornaments and jewellery.

55 African elephants are killed every day - that's one every 25 minutes.

100 years ago, they were maybe five million elephants across Africa. Today, there are less than 500,000.